The School Fund and its Management.

The State ought to be quite as able to pay the interest on any sum borrowed from this fund, and is quite as much interested in seeing its obligations fulfilled.

The school fund has been managed in a manner in which the school fund of the State of Virginia has been managed by the Democratic party.

Now observe how this plain provision of the Constitution has been ignored and set at defiance by the Democratic party.

As far back as October 29th, 1873, the sum of $16,970 was taken from the school fund. Since that time there have been three regular sessions and one extra session of the Legislature, not counting the present one.

Why has not that money been levied for? Again, on August 10th, 1876, the further sum of $35,000 was taken from the school fund. Since that time there have been two regular sessions of the Legislature, and yet no repayment of the money.

The fact is that the Democratic party has run the State in debt to such an extent that it has now become a very serious and embarrassing matter for it to meet the payment of it by facing the music and increasing the State tax.

They find it more agreeable to go on increasing the debt than to take the steps necessary to discharge it. But now that the people know the facts and realize the extent to which they have been imposed upon by false pretenses in the canvass, they will demand of that party to face the responsibility and take the consequences.

There was a stormy scene in the British House of Commons yesterday. In the course of a protracted session Dr. Playfair called Diggar a scoundrel. He afterward apologized to the House, but refused to apologize to Diggar.

John Bright, commenting on the fact that Parnell and ten of his partisans had each spoken thirty-three times, said this was the most willful obstruction of business that ever occurred, and that it was an unpardonable insult to the House and the Government.

Gladstone, it is said, will introduce a resolution intended to meet the difficulty. The Irish obstructionists have their reply to arranged, and it is said they will be able to obstruct the session until Thursday afternoon without action on the coercion measures.

The House has now been sitting continually since 11 A. M. Monday.

Bellevue.

The street car tracks were with difficulty kept open Tuesday, and the cars had to make poor time.

Some gentlemen who feel a want of opportunity to borrow money from our building associations, are in favor of starting another new one. The recently formed Loan Association had many applications for stock that it could not give, and no doubt, if the right ones take hold of the matter, another association could be organized in a very short time.

Some of the farmers or others who are in the district supplying Bellevue with butter, although not using oleomargarine, certainly know how to get a good price for their surplus lard; and, consequently, although milk is scarce, butter is plentiful than usual this winter.

The Street Commissioners took a shovelful and cleaned out some of the principal crossings Tuesday morning.

The Presbyterian church proposes to provide money for the preacher's salary and for general expenses in a little more certain manner than has been done by voluntary contributions. The success which the canvassers have met with will probably result in giving an increased salary hereafter to the pastor of the congregation.

The wharfboat and a barge of railroad are high and dry on the ice, somewhat twisted.

The school house clock no doubt stopped Monday, as it ran a little and stopped a little, alternately.

A Dr. Kirkwood is being formed here. To this organization both large and general contributions have been made by the Dr. Kirkwoods. It is a new organization, having been in existence only a few years.

The matter of changing some of the school books was before the School Board Monday night. Mr. Morton, publisher's agent, was before the Board, and the matter was referred to a committee. The change proposed is only that from the old McGuffey to the new.

James G. Archer, formerly a citizen of Bellevue, but now of Columbus, is visiting here.

The darkey boys who burglarized Will Carroll's grocery, pleaded guilty and were sent to St. Clairsville. They also acknowledged being the authors of the robbery at Jennings's some time ago.
